

The GUILD OF OREGON WOODWORKERS Announces

The Fundamentals of Woodworking Course

The Guild of Oregon Woodworkers intends to develop classes to help you to learn the craft of woodworking. These first informational classes are designed to give you a rudimentary introduction into woodworking and will give you some basics needed to take more structured and hands-on classes. They will be taught by two qualified woodworkers who have years of woodworking and teaching experience. From here you can go on to more advanced classes either through the Guild, Northwest Woodworking Studio, Portland Community College or the Oregon College of Art and Craft.

These first two classes are totally free and do not require being a member of the Guild.

Why is the Guild offering these classes?

With the demise of the vocational school programs there are few choices for anyone to even find out if they want to learn the craft. It is up to outside organizations to take on this responsibility. We feel that it is in the best interest of the "Art of Woodworking" that we take up that call.

We are working toward establishing a place for all to come and learn some of the basics of woodcraft. So, let the classes begin!

If you are interested in taking these courses, when they are available, please fill out the application below. We will notify you of the class dates. Information will also be available on our web site or in our newsletter.
